GOOD WORK

Done Daily in Barre—Many Citizens Tell of It.

Nearly every reader has heard of Doan's Kidney Pills. Their good work in Barre still continues, and our citizens are constantly adding endorsement by public testimony. No better proof of merit can be had than the experience of friends and neighbors. Read this case:

Mrs. Eliza Mitchell, formerly of 42 Maple Ave., says: "For some time I was annoyed with kidney complaint. There was trouble with the kidney secretions which were irregular and too frequent especially at night when my rest was greatly disturbed. I also had terrible pains just over my hips and these would sometimes extend up through my shoulders. I also had dizzy spells and every cold I caught made me suffer more acutely. My son had used Doan's Kidney Pills with great benefit so I decided to try them. I got a box at E. A. Brown's drug store and had taken but a few doses when I experienced relief, and the use of two boxes improved my condition in every way. The pain in my back lessened, and the secretions were regulated."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburne Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

The Times' Daily Short Story.

The Case of Mme. Dumont.

(Original.)

Two gentlemen sat chatting in a garden enclosed in one of those high walls with which the antebellum people of New Orleans were used to surround the rear parts of their dwellings. Fabian Marchand had just returned from Paris and was telling his friend, Edgar Brosian, of the French capital.

"I saw there," he said, "a very beautiful woman, Mme. Dumont. Though she was middle aged, she had more attention than most of the young girls. But there was a special reason for this besides her beauty."

"Certainly it could not have been a discreditable reason. Mme. Dumont has lived in New Orleans, and we never had a more respected woman in society here."

"What she may have been here I do not know; what she is in Paris I do know. If she had a good reputation, she has lost it."

A smothered exclamation came from an upper window of a house extending back into an adjoining garden. Both men looked up. A young man about twenty years old was staring down upon them with an expression of horror. For a moment his eyes were fixed on Marchand; then he disappeared from the window.

"Great heavens!" cried Brosian.

"What is it?" asked the other eagerly. "Who is he?"

"Ernest Dumont."

"A relative?"

"Her son. Let us go in."

"No; I will wait here. In addition to the pain I have given him, I will not put him to the trouble of hunting for me."

The men had not long to wait. An intimate friend of young Dumont was in the same house with him, and presently this friend came into the garden through a front gate and back toward where Marchand and Brosian were sitting. He presented his card, bearing the name Sidney Mason, and said:

"I am the bearer of a message from Ernest Dumont to—He looked from the one to the other.

"Mr. Marchand drew a card and handed it to him. 'This is Mr. Brosian. You will represent me, Brosian, will you not?'"

Brosian assented, and Marchand withdrew. Brosian chatted a long while with the young man in the hope that amends might be made. But in such a case amends are impossible. A meeting between the two principals was arranged for the next morning in a wood above the city on the Mississippi river.

Marchand, as the challenged party, had the choice of terms. He chose pistols, the two principals to be stationed fifty paces apart, then to advance, firing at will. At the meeting when the word was given to advance and fire Marchand stood still. He never raised his pistol. Dumont, white as a sheet, advanced firing, but sent three bullets at his mother's trundle before hitting him. On being struck Marchand fell, dangerously wounded. Then both parties left the field.

For a long while Marchand hung between life and death. Then he recovered. As soon as he was able to stand he sent word to Dumont that he was able and ready to give him further satisfaction. Dumont asked if his enemy would fight or stand up to be killed, and when informed that he would act as before the matter was dropped. Then Marchand left New Orleans to go no one knew where.

The cause of the duel was kept secret. Sympathy went with Marchand, who was universally beloved. It was considered that it was a case of the hot blood of youth touching upon the good sense, forbearance, of middle age.

Young Dumont shut himself up from society, and it was generally believed that the blame attached to his action was killing him. It was not that. It was a doubt that Marchand's words were false, a doubt that when it once fastened itself upon the son's brain he could not shake it off.

One day—it was some months after Marchand's departure—Dumont received
